2. Introduction:

English for University Students

This course provides first-year students with real-world language aspects and topics to build their background knowledge of English and develop their communication ability, including expressing ideas related to their field or major. The course develops academic and proficient language skills through vocabulary, pronunciation, grammar, listening, speaking, reading, and writing activities. The main coursebook content is Theme 1 (Education) of General English for University Students. Additional topics may be taken from other books and the internet, with materials adapted to students' levels.

3. Aim of the Course:

This course aims to provide first-year students with real-world English language knowledge and skills that develop their communication ability, comprehension, and confidence, and enable them to use English in academic contexts and express ideas related to their field or major.

4. Objectives:

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to:

- Enhance listening skills to understand spoken English in conversations, lectures, presentations, and audio recordings.
- Communicate successfully in English through speaking and discussions, developing fluency, pronunciation, vocabulary, and grammar.
- Develop reading comprehension and analyze articles, tales, reports, and academic materials using appropriate reading and vocabulary strategies.
- Communicate ideas effectively in writing, including reports, letters, emails, and essays, with appropriate grammar, vocabulary, sentence structure, and organization.
- Use English more comfortably in everyday circumstances and develop spoken and written fluency.

• Develop cultural thoughtfulness through understanding and appreciating English-speaking cultures, social norms, practices, and idiomatic expressions.
• Analyze and evaluate information, arguments, and opinions in English and express thoughts critically.
• Develop self-study skills through effective use of dictionaries, internet resources, and language-learning materials.
